INT. KITCHEN - DAY

Parental and man-child, pushing the boundaries of adulthood as fast and far as they will go, collide in the busy to-do-ness of after school ritual.

PARENT

Homework?

MAN CHILD

All in school drugery licked and split.

PARENT

I'm not even going got pretend to know what that means.

MAN CHILD

It means, as always, I'm ahead of the game.

PARENT

Do they teach you anything at that school?

MAN CHILD

For instance?

PARENT

Not gonna go there. Any grand master plan for dinner.

MAN CHILD

Tacos.

PARENT

Stunned. What if, and let's just keep our options open here, we went Someplace Else?

MAN CHILD

You mean someplace else, someplace else or Someplace Else.

PARENT

Well there's only one Someplace Else that I know of.

MAN CHILD

What's the option I have to keep open?

PARENT

Grandpa is buying.

MAN CHILD

Is there no end to the evil in this world?

PARENT

Keep in mind, if it weren't for your grandfather, you wouldn't be here.

MAN CHILD

How does that work again?

PARENT

Well, the Leader of the Pack descends from the All High on the Mighty Steed of Love.

MAN CHILD

You can stop right there.

PARENT

I'm just warming up. Wait til I get to the good part.

MAN CHILD

There is no good part.

PARENT

You are wise beyond your years, son/daughter of mine.

Man child stops for a moment, turning the subject matter serious.

MAN CHILD

Mom/Dad?

PARENT

(catching tone change)
What is it?

MAN CHILD

Is mom/dad okay?

PARENT

Yes, dear. What makes you ask that?

MAN CHILD

Well. She/He. Is mom/dad an alien lizard from the planet Corinth?

PARENT

Who told you that?

MAN CHILD

Mom/Dad did.

PARENT

No dear, your mother/father is not from Corinth. She's/He's just in a rock band. And in a deep pile of monkey doo. Now go get grandpa and tell him to put his teeth in. I'll meet you in the rocket launcher. Go go go go.
