Gentlemen:

Whereas I appreciate your dogged desire to collect this supposed debt, let me make perfectly clear that we have all our facts straight.

I purchased an Xbox 360 last year. Included in all the paperwork was a card for a free issue of Xbox magazine.

Let's go over that again. A FREE issue of Xbox magazine.

I filled out the card and sent it in. I believe it had one of the standard "cancel anytime" clauses on it. Unfortunately I did not make a copy of the card, never thinking it would result in this madness.

Regardless, it advertised a FREE issue of Xbox magazine.

Do I need to go over that again? Or look up the definition of "FREE" for you?

I received the magazine and shortly after an invoice for a year's subscription. I wrote "cancel" on the invoice and returned it.

I got another invoice and did the same thing.

Then I got my first letter from North Shore.

So now I am writing you to inform you:

I received my free issue.

Thank you.

I am not interested in a subscription to Xbox 360.

You need no other information than that. Not interested.

I received my one free magazine. (I also received a second one during this time, which I will gladly return if someone wants to send me a return slip.)

But I do not wish to subscribe to the magazine and I will not pay for something I did not request nor purchase.

Feel free to contact me if this letter wasn't clear enough for you.

Thank you for your time and cooperation,
Sincerely,

Nathan McMahan
